THE Philosophical Review

Edited by J. G. SCHURMAN and J. E. CREIGHTON.

The REVIEW is a bi-monthly journal devoted to the interests of the philosophical sciences: Logic, Psychology, Ethics, Aesthetics, Metaphysics, and the Philosophy of Religion. It has now completed its fourth year, and is recognized both at home and abroad as the representative American journal of philosophy. Though receiving support from private endowments, so that its financial basis is sound and durable, the terms of the subsidy require that it shall be an absolutely free organ of contemporary philosophy.

The REVIEW usually contains 128 pages. About one-half of the space of each number is given to original articles and discussions. The remainder includes carefully prepared critical reviews of the most important books, classified summaries of articles appearing in the leading American and European philosophical magazines, prompt and trustworthy accounts of the contents and character of new books, and notes of general interest regarding philosophers and the progress of philosophy. Special attention is directed to the classified summaries, which enable a reader of the REVIEW to learn at a minimum of trouble, labor, and expense what results and conclusions, bearing on the subject in which he is specially interested, are appearing from time to time in the other philosophical periodicals.

Articles intended for publication, books for review, exchanges, and all correspondence in reference to these, should be addressed to the junior editor, Professor J. E. Creighton, Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y. Authors of newly published philosophical works are requested to send a brief account of their scope and content for publication. Subscriptions may be forwarded, when more convenient, through any of the publishers' European agents mentioned on the first cover page, but otherwise all business communications should be addressed to

GINN & COMPANY, 7, 9, and 13 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

Yearly Subscription, $3.00 (12s. 6d.); Single numbers, 75 cents (3s. 6d.).
